

MARCIA MOXEY HODGES

Chief Inspector, Office of Inspection, Office of Inspector General
U.S. Department of Homeland Security

Ms. Hodges is a legacy member of the Department of Homeland Security (DHS), working as a Chief Inspector for the Office of Inspector General (OIG). Ms. Hodges oversees a division of inspectors, and directs highly complex analytical reviews of DHS operations and programs to determine their efficiency and effectiveness.

Prior to DHS, Ms. Hodges worked for FEMA's OIG from 1999 to 2003. While at FEMA OIG, Ms. Hodges led a multi-disciplined team in New York City to assist and facilitate FEMA's response to the September 11, 2001, terrorist attacks. As a result of those efforts, Ms. Hodges led an additional team, which was tasked by Congress, to review and identify areas of statutory weakness and shortcomings.

From 1993 to 1999, Ms. Hodges held Emergency Management positions within FEMA's Response and Recovery Directorate.

From 1986 to 1993, Ms. Hodges worked in the private sector. She is a native of the Virginia/Washington, D.C. metropolitan area and a graduate of Hood College. Ms. Hodges completed the Federal Executive Institute PCIE Leadership Development Academy in December 2004.